What Happened? November 2018 Elections

Tuesday December 4, 2018
10:50 a.m. - 12:05 p.m.
Knapp Hall University Club

Presented by
Dr. Michael Motta
*Assistant Professor,
History & Political Science
Farmingdale State College*

American politics are always dynamic but the past decade has been unprecedented. In 2008, the US elected its first African-American president, Barack Obama. In 2016, the US elected Donald Trump as president, turning conventional wisdom and the predictions of nearly all political scientists and pundits on their head. In 2018, Americans will go to the polls again. Will the House of Representatives maintain its Republican majority? What about the Senate? We won't know until November but, regardless, it's going to be fascinating. Join Dr. Motta, Assistant Professor of political science, as he gives a post-election run-down and looks ahead to the next few years of American politics.
